

The Honorable Eric Adams
Mayor of the City of New York
City Hall
New York, NY 10007

Dear Mayor Adams,

For more than forty years, New York's bedrock Right to Shelter has served as an inviolable baseline of decency, ensuring that those without homes are not relegated to sleeping on the streets, exposed to the elements. It is because of this critical right that New York City does not have the vast tent encampments seen in so many other cities around the country. Since 1981, the Right to Shelter has given hundreds of thousands of homeless individuals a way off the streets and a pathway to stability.

Simply put, the Right to Shelter saves lives, and is integral to the humanity of our community.

Furthermore, New York City has, throughout its entire history, served as a welcoming home for people from all nations and cultures. This is because it is, always has been, and always will be a vibrant and tolerant city of opportunity, where new arrivals often already have family, friends, and contacts to help them resettle and start new lives.

We, the undersigned, are strongly opposed to any efforts to weaken or in any way undermine New York's legal Right to Shelter, and believe that doing so would put countless vulnerable individuals at risk of grave harm. We look to you as the Mayor of a city with proud history as a beacon of humane, practical, and progressive values, and a community dedicated to the simple yet powerful idea that no one should be left to live, or die, on our streets – not longtime New Yorkers, not new arrivals, no one – in order to show true leadership at this key moment in history.

As you face the challenges of addressing the ongoing crisis of mass homelessness, which is being compounded by the current humanitarian crisis created by the influx of asylum seekers and other new arrivals, we ask you to adhere to these five basic principles:

1. The Right to Shelter in New York City must not be eroded in any way. No human being must ever be relegated to sleeping on the streets.
2. Families with children in need of shelter must always be provided with safe placements in facilities with private locking rooms.
3. All three levels of government must work together cooperatively to formulate, fund, and implement practical and humane responses to the current humanitarian crisis.
4. The influx of asylum seekers and other new arrivals to New York requires a comprehensive statewide decompression and resettlement plan using the full authority and resources of the Governor's office.
5. The Right to Shelter is a floor, not a ceiling. The only real answer to homelessness is housing.

We stand ready to work with you in furtherance of these principles.
